INTRODUCTION: POLITICAL ECONOMY AND GLOBAL CAPITALISM

Robert Albritton, Bob Jessop and Richard Westra

The intellectual impetus for this volume is the abiding interest of its editors in presenting insightful, cutting-edge analysis of the current global political economy in order to advance a political economy of our capitalist, neoliberal, neo-conservative global futures. In meeting this challenge, the contributors of this book develop distinctive and original theoretical frameworks and propose new mediations between theory and history, which is a deeply problematic relationship in the social sciences. Put differently, this volume offers theory-informed writing which counterbalances empirical research on current world-historical events and trends with an eye towards unfolding a future of human socio-economic betterment. We view this project as a sequel to an earlier collection, edited by Albritton, Jess, Westra, and Zeng, Phases of Capitalist Development: Rites, Crisis, and Globalization. Like with that well-reviewed volume, we have gathered internationally recognized contributors who are based in diverse countries and write from different conceptual perspectives within the critical political economy tradition broadly understood. The key difference between the earlier and current volumes, however, is their respective orientations in time and location in time. While the previous work focused on probing the equilibria and forecasting its successor world-historical phases to understand the present, the current project focuses on the present in order to better inform our reflections on possible or likely global futures. Moreover, whereas all the essays in the previous volume were written during or prior to the year 2008, this collection captures the momentous reconfigurations of the global political economy, and its leading economies, in the intervening years.

NOTE: It is probable the most dramatic (and subsequently dramatized) events to have happened in the intervening years on the global political stage and possibly
